Tell Me Exactly What Happened

Gene is retired and lives alone. He has no one to talk to at home, so he is very talkative when he's out. He chats with his barber, the cashier, the mail carrier — anyone who'll talk to him.

One day, Gene was at the supermarket talking to Phil, who works at the meat counter. They were talking about inflation and good ways to cook cheaper cuts of meat. Gene asked how much the cheapest ground beef was, and Phil told him.

"Man!" Gene said. "That's too expensive for my budget today! Thanks anyway, Phil."

Next he looked at the hot dogs in the refrigerated case. Gene said to the shopper next to him, "Prices are too high, aren't they?"

The woman said politely, "They sure are."

"Six hot dogs for $8! That's robbery!" Gene said.

The woman pointed to the package he was holding and said, "That brand is expensive. The cheaper ones are over there."

Gene thanked her and went on shopping.

At the register, Gene chatted with the cashier. He paid in cash and said, "Well, at least you left me a few dollars this time, Cindy!" Cindy laughed.

Gene started walking home with his groceries. In that area, most people drive everywhere, so a police officer noticed him and stopped to see if he was OK.

"Good afternoon, sir," he said. "I noticed you've got some heavy bags. Are you OK? Did your car break down?"

"I'm fine, Officer," Gene said. "I was going to take an Uber home, but my money's gone, so I had to walk."

"What happened to your money, sir?"

"I was robbed," Gene said.

The officer got a serious look on his face and said, "You were robbed? Tell me exactly what happened."

Gene said, "I went in the store with $90.00, and I left with these two bags. I got milk, eggs, cereal and pasta. I didn't even get any meat! And I only have $3.00 left!"

The police officer said, "I see. So you spent all your money. You weren't robbed."

Gene said, "Well, if that isn't robbery, I don't know what is!"

- ground beef = 牛のひき肉
- budget = 予算
- thanks anyway = でも、ありがとう
- robbery = 強盗, ぼったくり
- groceries = 食料品
- break down = (車が) 故障する
- take an Uber home = ウーバーで家に帰る

That's Not ENGLISH!

Tom (T) and Jun (J) are walking to Jun's car.

- T: What happened to your car?
 J: I happened an accident yesterday. Another car hit the passenger side of my car.
 T: Wow! You're lucky you weren't hurt.
 J: The car looks worse than it is. It still runs. There's nothing broken about the engine. It just needs a lot of body work.
 T: Are you going to get it repaired? It looks like it will be expensive.
 J: Yeah, but the other guy's insurance will cover it. I'm taking it to the shop* next weekend.
 T: How long will it take them to fix it?
 J: The mechanic said that it would take about a week, so I won't get it back until the following weekend.
 T: But you work during the week. How are you going to do?
 J: I'll have to ride my bike, I guess*. Unless* you want to pick me up ...
 T: I guess* I could do that. What are friends for?
 H: Great! I owe you!

★ the (repair) shop = 修理店
