Are You Sure You Want To ...?

Deanna got her first credit card when she was in college. Paying by credit card was convenient. She didn't have to go to the bank to withdraw money every time she wanted to buy something. She charged everything — her textbooks, clothes, shoes and gas for her car. She even charged most of her meals.

Another thing she liked about paying by credit card was that she didn't have to pay the balance in full every month. If she didn't have a lot of money in her savings account, she could just make a minimum payment. But there was a catch — if she didn't pay the balance in full, she had to pay interest on the balance.

Deanna didn't want to pay interest, so she almost always paid the balance in full every month. Soon she got offers in the mail for credit cards from other banks. By the beginning of her second year in college, Deanna had three more credit cards. That's when she started getting careless. She charged too many things, and she made only the minimum payment for a few months. By the end of her second year, she was in debt.

Deanna knew she had to pay off her debt. First, she cut up all of her credit cards except one. She kept that one to use in case of emergency. She taped a note to herself on the card. Then, she carefully made a budget.

For the next year, Deanna didn't buy anything that wasn't absolutely necessary, and she managed to pay off her credit cards. She was feeling much better about her financial situation, so she decided to take a trip to New York City to celebrate.

When she got to the hotel, the front desk clerk asked her for a credit card. She handed it to him, and he looked at it carefully. Quietly he said, "Are you sure you want to use this card?"

"What do you mean?" Deanna asked.

"You might want to pay cash instead," he said, handing the card back to her.

Deanna took the card back and saw the note she had written to herself a year earlier. It said, "DO NOT USE NO MATTER WHAT!"

Susan's Diary

Saturday, May 30th (10:05 p.m.)

Am I an analog person or a digital person? I started thinking about this today after I talked to my friend Noriko. She told me about a conversation she had had with one of her grandkids. One day when she was at her daughter's house for dinner, her grandson was studying Japanese, and he asked Noriko about the radicals of some kanji. She taught him a few of them and then told him to look them up, so he reached for his smartphone. She told him to look them up in a kanji dictionary instead of on his phone. She told him she preferred the kanji dictionary because she was an analog person, not a digital person. He asked her what the difference between them was, and she explained that an analog person gets information from paper or humans, and a digital person gets information from the Internet. I am not 100% one or the other, but I think I'm more digital than analog. I usually read books and news on a device, and all of my music is digital. I prefer it that way because it takes up less space. When it comes to work, I used to prefer doing my work on paper, but now I've come to prefer doing everything on the computer. But when I'm communicating with friends, I'd rather talk face to face or on the phone than text.

Notes and examples:

Japanese = 国語

- ① Japanese is one of the subjects that every student has to take.
- ② A: What's your best subject in school?
B: Um ... I guess it's Japanese.

radical = 語根

- ① Kanji are made up of different radicals.
- ② A: What does this radical mean?
B: It means "water."

look A up / look up A = ~を調べる

- ① If you don't know the meaning of a word, look it up in the dictionary.
- ② A: What time does the movie start?
B: I don't know. I'll look it up online.

more A than B = BというよりはA

- ① I don't want anything for dinner. I'm more tired than hungry.
- ② A: I can't believe he canceled at the last minute. You must have been so mad.
B: I was more annoyed than angry.

when it comes to A = ~のことになると

- ① When it comes to cars, he's an expert.
- ② A: She gives great advice. She's so smart!
B: Yes, except when it comes to men. She always picks the wrong guy.

I'd rather do ... (than do ~) = (~よりも)むしろ...したい

- ① I'd rather order takeout than cook.
- ② A: Want to go see a movie tonight?
B: No. I'd rather watch TV.

Everyone knows that stress is bad for us. It can disrupt the immune system, increase the risk of heart disease and harm the body in many other ways. Scientists have discovered one of the reasons: stress can alter key protein molecules in a cell, called telomeres, which cap the ends of chromosomes. Under normal conditions, every time cells divide, their telomeres shorten until the telomeres have vanished completely and the cells die. In a study of people under constant stress, scientists found that these telomeres shortened greatly compared with those of healthy, unstressed people. These findings emphasize the importance of managing stress, and scientists hope more studies will lead to better methods of stress management.

- T • F 1. Stress is bad for the immune system.
- T • F 2. Telomeres are protein molecules found in cells.
- T • F 3. Telomeres get shorter every time cells divide only when people are under great stress.
- T • F 4. When a cell's telomeres disappear completely, the cell dies.
- T • F 5. In people who were under constant stress, telomeres grew longer rather than shorter.

Anna (A) is talking to her friend, Mr. K (K), about his recent scuba diving trip.

A: How was your travel to Palau?

K: It was OK.

A: Why do you say that?

K: The weather wasn't as good as we had expected. And though the sea was clear, it was very windy, and it was always rain in the afternoon. So it was cold when we went back to land after diving.

A: That's too bad. Did you see a lot of fish?

K: No. We didn't see many fish at all.

A: How long were you there?

K: We were there for five days, but we went diving only three days.

A: Why only three days?

K: That was the plan. We had to finish diving at least twenty hours before our flight. That's a standard rule for divers.
